“ My Uncle Carlton assured me when my father Irvin Passed away that he knew my father had accepted Christ in his lifetime. That made so many things easier for me knowing I would see dad again. Thank you

“ I met Carlton about 1958. He was a department manager at Overton's Grocery store on High Street in Portsmouth. I was a 15-year-old bag boy. In those days bag boys did not get paid, they worked for tips. Many times, we bagged the groceries and carried them out to the car and there was no tip... 10 cents was common and the best, 25 cents. There was not much good about being a bag boy. However, this was my first real job and I learned so much. Things that seem simple today, but not so simple 60+ years ago. I learned to be punctual and to do what you agreed to do. I learned the store manager was god, the department managers worked hard, the women food checkers were special and the customers were king. I also learned that not all workers were the same and Carlton English was certainly unique. He provided a model that has lived with me for these many years and I thought of him often. Carlton would sympathize, inspire, listen and radiate an air of humor that acknowledged life was good, be happy. He always had a funny story. I only saw him once or twice these past years the last time at a Boy Scouts Court of Honor where my grandson and his were being honored. We were proud. I know people occasionally change with time, but I expect Carlton remained the same upbeat inspiration for all of those around him. He was a lifetime influence for me and I will never forget him.

My condolences to his close friends and family; I know they will miss him.
